OLD TIMER VISITS.

Jack Welch, popular and well known old timer of this and every other mining section of the state of Arizona, is in the District visiting his old friend, Harry Jennings, for several days. Welch is now located near Phoenix. Some years ago Welch attracted considerable attention when he stole a ride from the S. P. to El Paso to Phoenix. With his burro he loaded a freight train at Maricopa. A brakeman found him in a car and was about to throw him off. Welch demanded that his partner also be thrown off the train. The brakeman asked where his partner was. He was told, "in the car ahead." The brakeman went to the next car and looked. He found a fine specimen of the prospector's best friend and, upon returning, told Welch that he could ride as far as he wanted to if he could take his burro along.

PRIVATE CAR TAXES.

Private car companies operating in Arizona will this year pay into the state treasury over $26,000 in taxes, according to the statement of taxes levied on operations of this sort, just issued by the state tax commission. The Pullman company is the largest taxpayer of the private car lines, and it will pay the state of Arizona $13,729.78 in taxes. The smallest tax to be paid by any private car line is $1.49, this amount being levied on each of three companies. The private car lines operating in Arizona are assessed a tax equal to the average of all taxes, state, county or municipal, levied in the state during each year. This year the tax on private car lines is $1.4039 per $100 valuation. The tax is collected by the state treasurer direct, and goes into the general fund of the state.

THREE JUDGES TO SIT.

For the first time since Arizona became a state three federal judges will sit on a case in the United States district court in Phoenix, when the case of the Copper Queen Consolidated Mining company vs. the Arizona corporation commission comes up for hearing Oct. 16. Action was brought in the federal court by the company to test the validity of an Arizona statute which provides that in case any foreign corporation removes a case from the state courts to a federal court without the consent of the other party to the suit, that its license shall be revoked by the corporation commission. The corporation commission, acting upon a complaint against the Copper Queen company, notified it of its intention to revoke its license, and action was brought in the federal court for a temporary injunction restraining the commission from revoking the company's license. Judges William W. Morrow, William C. Van Fleet and W. H. Sawtelle, of the ninth circuit court of appeals will hear the case in Phoenix Oct. 16.
